Tarkett Hospitality's Expression Collection Provides Inclusive, Multi-Layered Design Evolution

DALTON, GA, November 1, 2022 — Taking cues from groundbreaking luminaries in music and high fashion that have challenged and changed the world of self-expression and personal identity, Tarkett Hospitality will launch its new Expression Collection of custom carpet this November at the 2022 Boutique Design New York event. Recognizing that conventional notions of masculine and feminine aesthetics have evolved from the way people dress to the way spaces are styled, Tarkett Hospitality has curated an eclectic, individualistic, and multi-layered collection that emphasizes fluidity and inclusiveness. Instead of abiding by traditional style definitions, the blurring of gender-specific elements and tones has produced exciting new visuals that reimagine the rules of décor.

“Our design team is constantly inspired by the trends we observe in fashion and self-expression, and we set out to explore how these evolving ideas could impact the built environment, and hospitality experiences specifically,” said Kim Drautz, Tarkett Hospitality President. “The Expression Collection provides a fresh, inclusive solution, with a new way of looking at pattern and color in designed spaces. The styles form multi-layered expressions that are open-ended and open to personal interpretation with geometrics, brushstrokes, lines, and color. In the end, these are patterns without patterns, designed for continual reinterpretation.”

Pulling from an earthy color palette of creams, browns, and charcoal, with dashes of sage and fuchsia, the 14 patterns in the Expression Collection can be customized to fit specific budget and project requirements. Designers can choose from Axminster woven, Digital Dye Injection (DDI), or tufted constructions, along with a variety of fiber types, textures, colors, and pile weights. The designs can also be made into custom rugs to enhance guest rooms, lobbies, and other open spaces.
